It's easy to be overwhelmed in the excitement of a sterling performance by the University of the Cordilleras Dance Squad that it doesn't take an effort to find them winners before they even meet the competition. After all, they make their routine look so effortless don't they?

With steady hands, and bodies fluid and supple, they made us proud by winning the 2011 National Cheerleading Championship on March 6 at the Ynares Sports Arena in Pasig. Chalk this up to hardwork, discipline, perseverance, patience. Virtues that we can immediately draw from the top of our heads to explain why they fly, flip, tumble and spin in a choreography that is almost unbelievably superhuman.

But suspend your disbelief for a moment and consider who they are.

Thirty-five boys and girls; 12 rookies fresh from high school 12 months ago, 23 veterans who were in high school 24 to 36 months ago. All students pursuing different fields but share a common passion: to challenge themselves physically and mentally through the sport of cheerleading.

So motherhood statements such as hard work, discipline, perseverance and patience do have a face in the UC Dance Squad after all. Ordinary students who do schoolwork, attend practices, keep their scholarships, keep themselves in shape by eating right and getting enough sleep, are drug-free, smoke-free and alcohol-free.

Not surprising that this Spartan-like regimen has its rewards. Not only do they become national contenders but emerge winners as well. That they come from humble beginnings is never a hindrance to their success. But to rise above some of the elite and privileged national competitors, the distinction becomes even more meaningful and richly deserved.

In time, the euphoria of the win will die down and the record will be etched in its proper place in history. But the sheen and luster of a brilliant performance by this group of competitors who are nothing less than paragons of youthful responsibility will never fade from our collective memories.

But these are words too many. The feat can just as easily be described in one word. Awesome.
